Morning Round Up

US ratchets up pressures on China with latest tariff move

President Trump announced a 10% tariff on $200bn in Chinese imports coming into effect from Monday the 24th of September, with the possibility of increasing the tariff to 25% in 2019 if no deal is reached. In a win for Apple, consumer electronics such as smart watches and Bluetooth devices were removed. As well as some chemicals, textiles and agricultural products. China hawks in the President's administration were disappointed with the move hoping for the full 25% to be implemented immediately. The President has to be concerned with the impact on prices such a move would have had especially given the mid term elections in November. We expect tariff driven inflation to hit on two fronts. Firstly, consumer prices in the US will go up hurting the average American. The move could also cause the Fed to speed up its rate hiking cycle in an attempt to maintain price stability. As we have mentioned previously, the tariff rhetoric and tough on China stance has played well with the Presidents political base, it remains to be seen if that message holds strong when people begin to feel the effects in their pockets. It is also worth noting that the Chinese have yet to signal any retaliatory measures. Beijing officials met this morning to formulate a response to yesterday's move. Reports indicate that the Chinese will move with retaliatory tariffs on up to $110bn of US exports. China have proved effective at selecting policy to directly target the President's base supporters by targeting agricultural sector in its first round of tariffs. Ultimately these actions represent a significant increase in trade tensions and a prolonged period of tariffs will hurt global growth outlook.

The US 10 Year pushes back towards 3%

The US 10 year yield traded above 3% yesterday, having not held these levels since May. While back in May there was much comment on the importance of the 3% level, the market is largely ignoring it this time round with curve inversion taking the limelight. The relative performance of short end (2 year yields) versus the long end (10 year yields) in recent months has been aggressive. The 2s10s spread has closed to 10 year lows, close to 20bps, with a year to date high of 78bps. A yield curve inversion has preceded every US recession since 1955. In the context of today's flattening yield curve, the question remains when does the curve go negative and how long will the interval be before an economic slow down.

Coca Cola exploring cannabis drink

Aurora Cannabis jumped 11% yesterday on reports of talks with Coca Cola. It is looking at developing wellness drinks using the non-psychoactive chemical derived from marijuana. Coca Cola has been diversifying its product portfolio to offset the slowing carbonated soft drink market with the recent acquisition of Costa Coffee in the UK and focusing on lower added sugar products such as Juice, Dairy & Plant, Hydration, Energy and Teas & Coffee. Cannabis based businesses are coming under increased scrutiny as mainstream corporates recognise the growth potential from the burgeoning sector.

Market View

The US sold off yesterday with the tech heavy NASDAQ closing down 1.43% and the broader S&P 500 finishing down 0.56%. 10 year yields broke 3% yesterday but finished the day at 2.99%, while the dollar weakened, trading close to $1.17 against the Euro. Asia trading was mixed with China selling off on the tariff announcement but the Nikkei posted strong gains up 1.4% on the day. Futures had indicated a negative open in Europe, however, most markets have opened up this morning. It's a quiet day on the data front with investors looking to Beijing for Chinese retaliatory trade measures.

Green REIT - Development projects drive positive surprise on NAV

Closing Price - €1.56

News

Green REIT posted strong results this morning that should drive the stock higher. Headline figures included growth of 11% in profits after tax, which came in at €144.2mln as well as 12% growth in EPRA earnings. EPRA net asset value (NAV) came in ahead of expectations up 8% on FY17 at 178.9c. This is an exceptionally strong number when you factor in a c. €55mln (8c on a per share basis) impact of stamp duty. NAV upgrades were driven by development projects becoming fully let and de-risking of the portfolio. Flagship buildings at One Molesworth Street and 5 Harcourt Road generated a combined gross NAV uplift of €92.6mln or net of capital expenditure €62.7mln. Annual contracted rent came in at €71.7mln as at the 30th of June 18, up €2.8mln on FY17, which includes the loss of €8.5mln in rent roll from the disposal of Westend Retail Park. EPRA earnings came in behind expectations at 5.3c per share mostly due to an increase of over €2mln in performance fees bringing total Investment Management fees to €19.6mln up €3.1mln on FY17. A full year dividend has been announced at 5.3c per share, which is up 6% on FY17 full year dividend but still some ways off management's targeted dividend of 4% of NAV or 7.15c. 5.3c represents a yield of 3.3% on current levels.

Comment

These results should be well received by the market with the surprise on valuations being the headline positive this morning. Realisation of development profits drove strong capital appreciation despite the headwind of the increase in stamp duty. Management has called out €600mln of a potential development pipeline, however, we will be looking to the conference call for more details on this. The release includes details relating to the potential addition of space at the Central Park development in Leopardstown, which has potential to accommodate an additional 400,000 sq ft as well as ambition to drive development at the Horizon Logistics Park. One area of concern relating to this mornings results would be the 18% growth in Investment Management fees yoy along with a loss on its interest rate swap portfolio, which hurt yoy earning per share (EPS) and EPRA EPS growth. Higher management fees reduces the businesses capability of distributing earnings to shareholders. We see limited capital appreciation in the Green portfolio past FY19 given our view on the commercial property cycle, however, we sees its value as a secure income paying stock. With a weighted average unexpired lease term (WAULT) of 8.8 years and quality of tenants, we are expecting management to achieve its 4% of NAV dividend yield target in FY19. We are moving the stock to Under Review.
