Morning Round Up

Market rout continue

The S&P posted its fourth straight day of losses yesterday, dropping below February's close to end the day at 2545.94. The next point of support for the index is 2532 the intraday low from February. Fears over global growth and the end of the 9 year bull run have come to the fore despite positive developments on trade and the Italian budget. The S&P is now trading at a 12m forward P/E of 14.59x, its lowest level since 2014 and 20% below its valuation at the start of the year. While in Europe, the Stoxx 600 is trading at a 12m forward P/E of 12.25x, its lowest level since 2013. The recent rout has made the Feds meeting even more important tomorrow. However, it is difficult to gauge how the market will respond to any of the potential scenarios, with a dovish hike likely to be most welcomed. We continue to advise clients that the market will remain volatile for the foreseeable, but based on the fundamental backdrop we are positive into H1 2019, we will update should this change.

Corbyn tables a motion of no confidence in PM

After forcing Mrs May to confirm a date for the parliamentary vote on Brexit, Labour party leader Jeremy Corbyn has tabled a vote of no confidence in the Prime Minister due to her failure to allow parliament to have a meaningful vote "straightaway". Mr Corbyn has tabled a motion against the PM and not the entire government, which smaller opposition parties have criticised. Mrs May is likely to survive the motion as dissenting Tories and the DUP are set to support the PM. Labour and Mr Corbyn's issue is they are unlikely to win a full confidence vote with the DUP supporting Mrs May. Further to a confidence vote, Labour strategists are not certain if they could win a general election, which is giving May some breathing room. As of now, the meaningful vote is scheduled for the week starting the 14th of January. Brexit uncertainty will continue to drive volatility until the market sees a clear path to a resolution.

AIB appoint Colin Hunt to the top office

In a swift and encouraging appointment by the board, Colin Hunt will take the top job at the bank from early next year. Mr Hunt, an internal candidate leading the bank's Wholesale and Institutional business, has held various roles across the financial sector having previous been Chief Economist at Goodbody, a special adviser to former ministers for finance and transport and more recently he lead Australian Bank Macquarie's Irish operation. A swift internal appointment should be positive for the stock and avoids any issues relating to pay caps that an external appointment might bring. An internal appoint also increases the probability of a shareholder distribution in FY20 but we will have to wait for guidance, on how Mr Hunt views the bank's excess capital. Please see our latest views on AIB.

Dalata update

Dalata released a year end trading update this morning with management reporting that they expect to meet FY 2018 expectations and that new developments completed in H2 2018 will drive deliver both revenue and earnings growth in FY 2019. Dalata reported RevPar growth in Dublin, UK and Regional Ireland of 8.8%, 3.2% and 5.3% respectively. While the pace of RevPar growth has slowed modestly on interim 2018, the growth rates remain extremely attractive for a company trading on 11x 2018 earnings. We reiterate our "Buy" recommendation. See our latest thoughts here.

Key Upcoming Events

19/12/2018 FOMC interest rate decision

Market View

US markets closed down over 2% yesterday as investors question growth. Meanwhile, Trump made his feelings on interest rate policy clear ahead of the Fed meeting this week. Asian trading continued in the same vein on disappointment from Chinese President Xi's speech offering no further stimulus. European markets followed this morning opening lower, while US futures are pointing to a positive open. As investors begin to finish up ahead of the holiday period, the Fed remains the most important event this week. On the data front, there is an Ifo Business Climate number out of German, some US housing data and Japanese trade data.
