

Key Themes This Week

The Week Ahead

Markets rounded off Q2 and the first half of 2023 with global equity markets on the front foot, the Technology index in the US having enjoyed record gains of over 30% in H1, whilst bond markets were struggling against a background of tough rhetoric from central bankers over the likely future direction of interest rates.

June was a strong month for global equity markets, with mid-single digit percentage gains across US and Japanese indices and low single-digit gains elsewhere. With little in the way of corporate results, these gains were driven primarily by robust US economic data, which points to the world's largest economy avoiding a recession. With gains in US equity indices in May having been driven predominantly by Technology, June saw a broadening of strength into sectors like Industrials and Financials as well as mid and small cap indices.

Japanese equities made further gains as the index trades at a post-1990 high on further overseas investor buying. European equities also enjoyed a positive month, building on earlier gains, with some of the same themes that drove the US present. The UK market struggled to make any headway however, held back by its high weighting in Financials and Healthcare which underperformed. Despite some optimism over potential government stimulus for the economy, Chinese related equity markets continue to struggle to make any progress.

Bond yields remain under upwards pressure and yield curve inversion reached the widest level since March in the US and is a multi-year high in Germany and the UK. UK Gilts have been impacted by the lack of progress in bringing inflation under control which led to a 50bps rate increase by the BOE in June, with 2-year Gilts yields trading at over 5%, their highest level since 2008. The US Dollar reversed some of its recent weakness into the month end against Sterling and the Euro, while the Japanese Yen and Chinese Yuan were trading at new lows for the year against the greenback.

Commodities enjoyed a stronger June having sold off for most of the quarter and first half of the year. Oil continues to trade in a range around $75 for Brent Crude, whilst Iron Ore has rallied on hopes for Chinese economic stimulus. Dry conditions in the US Mid-West have prompted a surge in volatility in food commodity prices in June, including corn.

The leaders of the Federal Reserve, ECB, BOJ and BOE all spoke on a panel yesterday at the ECB forum in Portugal last Wednesday. Fed Chairman Powell, ECB President Lagarde and Bank of England Governor Bailey all communicated that they were not done raising interest rates as inflation remains well above target. BOJ leader Ueda pointed to low Japanese inflation as not requiring rate rises. Following strong US economic data last week including Q1 GDP of 2.0% compared to expectations for 1.4%, futures markets are now pricing in a 75% chance of a 25bps rate rise at the Fed's July meeting, with the ECB expected to follow suit.

Headline Eurozone inflation reported on Friday fell from 6.1% year-on-year to 5.5% in June. Core CPI ticked up from 5.3% to 5.4% though this was marginally below the 5.5% expected. The Personal Consumption Expenditure (PCE) index in the US grew by 3.8% year-on-year, in-line with forecasts and the smallest increase in over two years.

A busy week for US economic data culminates in the Non-Farm Payroll employment numbers on Friday, with 200K job gains expected and an unemployment rate of 3.6% down from 3.7% in May. US markets will be closed on Tuesday for the 4th July holiday.

This week's Weekly Trader stocks are Cairn Homes, who report Q2 figures on Tuesday, Aviva and Kingspan.

Cairn Homes PLC

Closing Price: €1.16

Cairn Homes will issue a trading statement tomorrow ahead of the official release of its semi-annual earnings in September. We don't expect any major surprises in the statement given the tenor of management's most recent update in early May in which the company announced it had a forward order book of 1,905 units. This was very encouraging as it represented an increase of 400 units in the two months after the release of its FY23 earnings. In addition, it is estimated that 1,500 of these units are allocated for delivery this year which illustrates the significant demand in the Irish housing market. Furthermore, while its full year guidance of 1750-1800 units was slightly underwhelming, the narrow range provided highlights the clear visibility and confidence management has in its forward earnings. As has been the case with all Irish homebuilder updates in recent times, we would expect a comment from management about the continuing struggles in the planning system, however, as we have noted previously, Cairn has done an excellent job navigating this tough environment.

In the aftermath of the aforementioned May trading statement, we added the stock to our Analyst Conviction List as we believe the stock is materially undervalued by the market. Since this call, the share price has increased by 12% despite having pulled back from its 52-week high of €1.19 in the last couple of weeks.

After a difficult 2022 for Irish Homebuilding stocks, investor sentiment has clearly shifted more positive this year, with both Cairn and Glenveagh's shares up over 30% YTD. Cairn remains our preferred play in the sector given its relative outperformance navigating the planning environment and its dividend, which provides investors with a steady stream of income. Furthermore, on a valuation perspective on FY23 PE, it is currently trading at a 36% discount to its domestic rival. Therefore, despite its recent strong performance, we still believe the shares offer great value at their current level. Our price target of €1.35 provides investors with 16% upside and is supported by a dividend yielding over 5%. Thus, we continue to have a Buy recommendation on the stock.

Kingspan Group PLC

Closing Price: €60.90

Kingspan's share price has been soft through June on concerns over the general business environment rather than on company-specific performance. We take comfort, however, that it would appear to have found support just above the €55 level and recovered to over €60 in the past week. While the share price is up 19% year-to-date, at 18.8x FY23 P/E and 13.2x EV/EBITDA, the stock is still trading at over 15% discount to its long-term average. Relative to peers, the stock continues to trade at a premium, a familiar position over the past five years, the market willing to pay a premium for its superior business mix. Our €76.20 price target implies a 26% upside.

In its brief Q123 trading update issued at the end of April, management flagged that despite Q223 being set against a demanding comparative, the company expected to deliver a trading profit of just over €400m for H123, comfortably above the €360m that was in the market at the time. Management noted that the Americas was strong, Western Europe was solid for the most part with Central & Eastern Europe remaining tough. Australasia has seen a decent start to the year. Kingspan is scheduled to issue those H123 results on the 18th of August, when the market is looking for it to report an undemanding 5% decline in adj. EPS to €1.61 from a similar dip in adj. operating profit to €384.8m (over €400m guided) and little to no growth at the revenue line (+0.4% to €4.17bn).

The main points the market will be looking for other than performance against expectations and margin progress will be guidance on general market conditions and whether they are improving or deteriorating and Kingspan's relative positioning within that market. Given the deleveraged nature of the balance sheet, it would be hoped that there would also be some guidance on capital allocation through H223. Previously expected in October 2023, the latest from the inquiry team is that the Phase 2 report on the Grenfell Tower tragedy is now unlikely to be published until 2024. We do not expect management to comment on it in this results release.

Opportunities this week

Aviva PLC Closing Price: 395.2p

Aviva issued a Q1 trading update on May 1st. Protection & Health insurance sales were up 11%, driven by 25% growth in private healthcare sales, with Retirement sales up 17% driven by increasing demand for annuities in the rising rate environment. Flows into workplace pensions were also strong increasing 25%, with higher wages driving higher contributions. In general insurance gross written premiums were up 11% in constant currencies, with premium rate rises accounting for half that growth. Aviva confirmed it is on course to “meet or exceed group targets” provided in March.

Aviva reported full-year 2022 results on 9th March. A new share buyback program of £300m was announced, in-line with expectations, as was the final dividend of 20.7p, giving a total pay-out of 31p, compared to 22p in 2021. Group operating profit was up 35% to £2.2bn and the Solvency II ratio, the key measure of balance sheet strength, was 212%, both ahead of expectations for £1.8bn and 210% respectively. The beat was driven by the Life division where operating profit was 34% ahead at £1.9bn, significantly ahead of expectations for £1.5bn. Non-life operating profit was down 5% to £338m in-line with expectations. Strong Life performance was driven by inflows of £9bn to the Wealth division, whilst non-life was hindered by rising claims cost inflation. Aviva Investors the asset management arm, had £1.1bn of net external inflows, down from £3.3bn in 2021. Aviva are guiding for a 5% dividend increase in FY 2023 and low-to-mid single digit dividend growth thereafter.

Aviva has embarked on a radical restructuring program under CEO, Amanda Blanc, who joined in 2020. This has entailed the disposal of several non-core businesses for total consideration of some £7.5bn. Aviva also has plans to make £750m of cost efficiencies by 2024, which remain on track. Following March’s buyback announcement, total capital returned to shareholders since 2021 will be over £5bn. Aviva trades on an undemanding valuation with a prospective dividend yield of over 8%, amongst the highest yielding large-cap stocks in the UK market. Aviva also offers the prospect of both earnings and dividend growth. The stock is down 10% year-to-date and there is over 20% upside to our £4.85 price target. Aviva is on our Analyst Conviction List.

Bond Market Commentary

Bonds sold off late last week after a stronger than expected US GDP release and higher German inflation in Europe. The ECB conference in Sintra was the main event for markets last week where the hawkish message continued from the Fed, ECB and BOE as all said more hikes were needed to control inflation. Chair Powell said he doesn't rule out consecutive rate hikes and that policy hasn't been restrictive enough yet to bring inflation back to their 2% target. Madame Lagarde persisted with the hawkish tone stating that it's likely rates will stay at high levels "for as long as necessary". The BoE governor Bailey who is probably in the most precarious position of all three central bankers, said he is focusing on how much higher they need to raise rates this year on the back of runaway inflation. The "higher for longer" mantra seems to resonate across the three major central banks.

US data continued to surprise markets with a slew of solid data prints out last week. The jobless claims, personal consumption, consumer confidence, house prices and GDP to name but a few were all stronger. The US GDP revision for the first quarter came in at 2%, compared to forecasts of 1.4%. The US recession that markets have been waiting for all year doesn't look like it's coming anytime soon based on the data. We get the non-farm payrolls this Friday with 200k forecast. US bond yields spiked higher post the strong US GDP print Thursday and the US 2-year yield was back to pre-SVB highs seen in March at close to 5%.

The PCE inflation deflator for June - a Fed favourite - was out on Friday afternoon and showed that US inflation is trending lower in June at 3.8%, in line with forecasts, but down from 4.4% the previous month. Swaps markets now price in an 85% chance of a 25bp hike at the July 26th meeting and a 60% chance of another one by November. Markets now see the Fed Funds rate peaking this year at close to 5.5% and staying above 4% until the end of next year. Chair Powell reiterated that he intends to hike two more times from the remaining four meetings this year and that markets should be mindful of the adage; don't fight the Fed.

German inflation rose to 6.8% in June versus 6.3% the previous month, driven by transport subsidies from last year. This is higher than what the ECB would have hoped for the bloc's largest economy and in stark contrast to Spain's 1.6%, which was below the 2% level for the first time in two years. The divergence in inflation between two of the biggest eurozone economies highlights the dilemma for the ECB in controlling inflation. Eurozone headline inflation, out on Friday, was lower at 5.5% in June with inflation falling in 18 of the 20 eurozone countries. However, sticky core inflation rose to 5.4%, up from the previous month's 5.3% print. Services inflation at 5.4% is at a record high for the bloc and central bankers have noted the pressures from wage growth and services on core inflation. The Inflation swaps market still sees prices well above the ECB target at 2.5% in five years' time.

The ECB hawks desired to show markets, this week, that they intend to bring rates to sufficiently restrictive territory and keep them there for an extended period. At the ECB annual conference in Portugal, Lagarde ensured this message was communicated effectively, as she noted that "rates are to stay elevated for as long as necessary." The market still believes that they will be cutting rates by early next year, but Lagarde also dismissed this idea saying markets "must avoid expectations of too-rapid policy reversal." ECB policy makers have committed to a July hike and that has been well communicated. ECB Vice President Luis de Guindos saying another rate hike in July is "fait accompli" and the market has already moved on to the September meeting. The swaps market thinks another 25bp hike will likely be delivered in September and sees a peak of 4% after that meeting.

The below graph shows the US and German 2-10-year yield spreads, where the recent re-inversion has been highlighted by market commentators due to its relevance as to the probability of recession. This re-inversion saw the US curve below minus 100bps last week given the hawkish Fed rhetoric. German short-end rates also sold off Thursday afternoon after the higher inflation print. Irish 10-year yields were higher at 2.85% last week though the HICP inflation print did come in lower at 4.8% in June.
